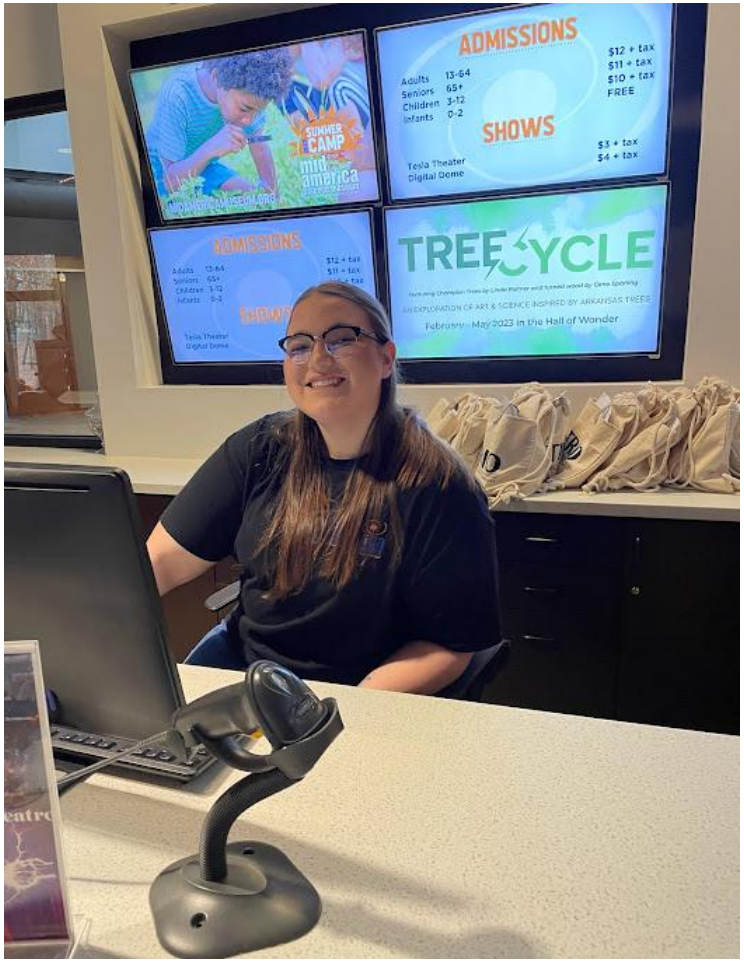
Mid-America Science Museum
Social Narrative

I am going to Mid-America Science Museum Today!

There are big dinosaurs outside! They roar very loud, but they are not real.

When I walk in the door, I will see someone at the admissions desk. First my family or group needs to buy tickets, then I can go play!



The museum can be a busy place! I will remember to stay close to my own family or group.

It might be a good idea to use the bathroom before I play. There are bathrooms on every level, including family bathrooms in the Marvelous Motion Gallery.

If I need any help I should look for a staff member. They will all wear a black shirt like this.

The first place to play is Marvelous Motion.
Everything here is about how things move.

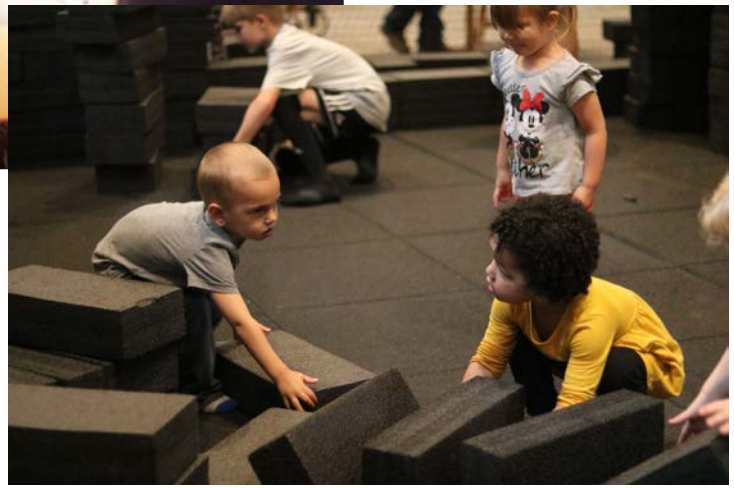
Next, I can walk over the Light Bridge. There are several exhibits to play with along the windows.

The water feature exhibit is so tall I can play on two floors! Upstairs, I can launch a ball in the air.

Downstairs, I can play and send balls up streams of water. There are hand blow dryers nearby if I get too wet, but remember they can be loud!

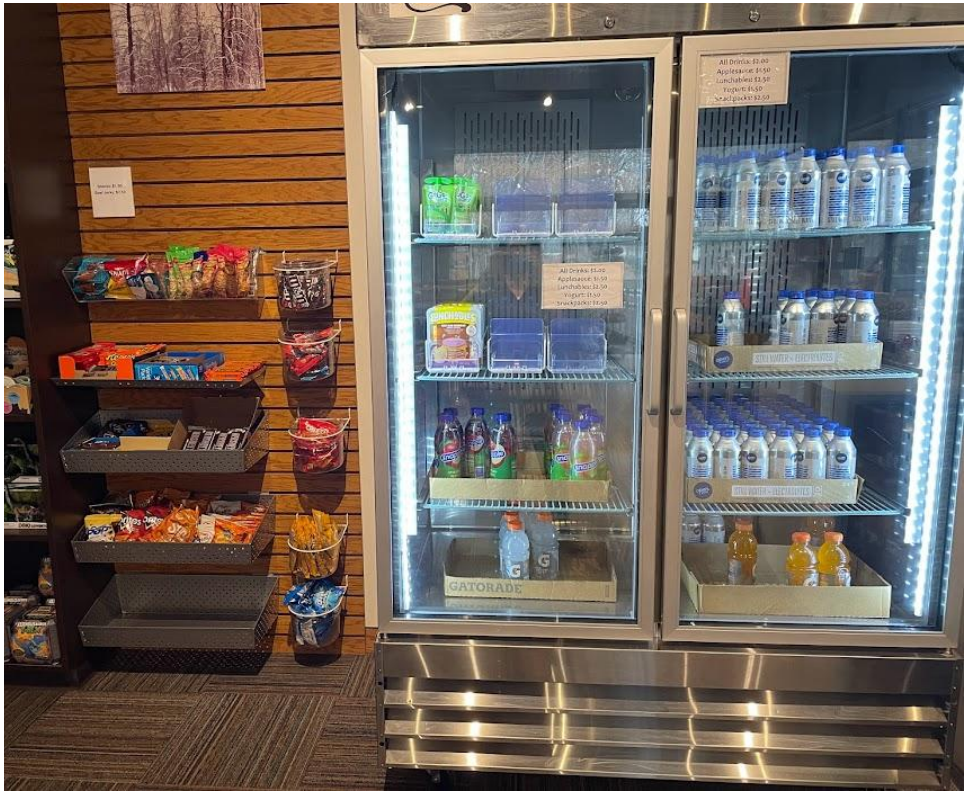
Down the ramp, I will see a big tree inside! This area is all about things that are underground.

There is so much to do downstairs! I can touch and play with everything!

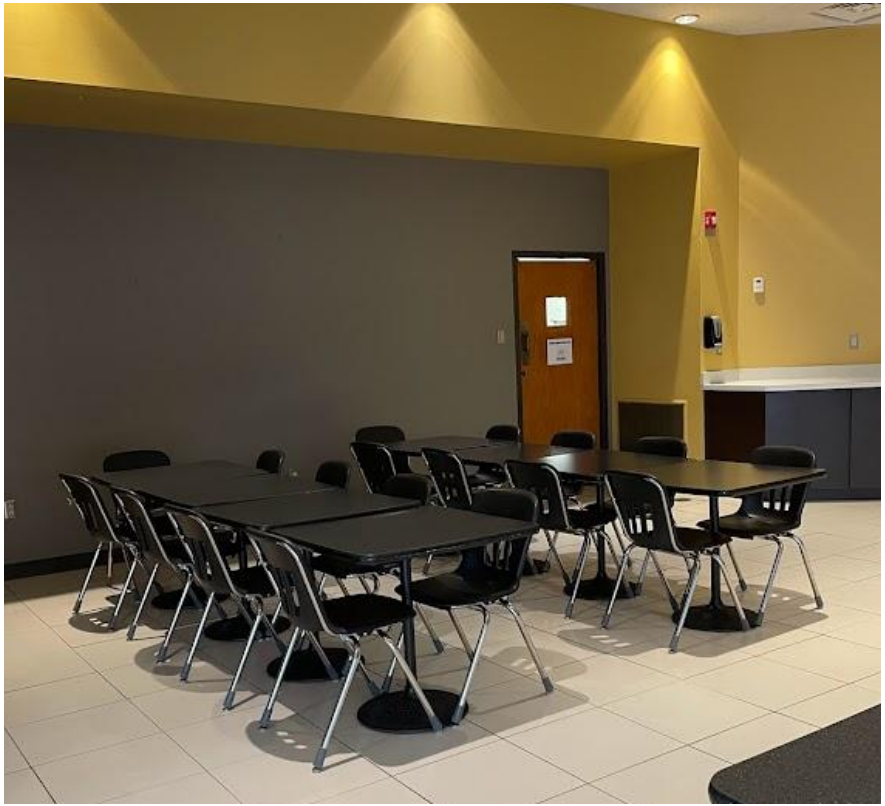


The Tinkering Studio is a special area where I can use my hands to make, build, or mess with materials and tools.

I might need a snack break while I’m at the museum. I can get food and drinks in the Museum Store at the entrance, or there is a water fountain in the public picnic area.



Sometimes the museum is loud and busy, and I might want a calm area. The public picnic area inside is quiet, or sometimes I can calm down in the Tinkering Studio.



I might go see a show in the Tesla Theater or Digital Dome Theater. These shows might be loud and bright.

The SkyWalk is outside. You feel high up in the trees! But it’s safe to run and play on the nets.

Under the SkyWalk is the Dino Dig, where you can find a utahraptor skeleton!

There are a lot more dinosaurs on the Dino Trek! Some roar, but they are just models. It’s fun to walk and see the dinosaurs.

Then, after playing, we will leave the same way we came in. Bye, Mid-America Science Museum. See you next time!
